

Grad School Digest – Content Writer

Thank you for your interest in being a content writer at Grad School Digest! To familiarize yourself with the goals of our blog, we aim to write about all things science in a language that is friendly to a wide variety of audiences. We understand that scientific language can be intimidating, and we hope to foster curiosity and engagement about all things science through our writing.

As a content writer, you will write a post about a topic of your choice that will be published. Please have the topic approved by the editor before proceeding with the writing component. Each post should be around 700-1000 words with at least one figure relating to your body of work. Once your topic has been approved and a deadline has been set, please email the following to gradschooldigest@gmail.com:

- Photo of yourself for the website
- A short 3-4 sentence paragraph about your research interests and interests outside of the lab (refer to the “about us” section of the blog for examples)
- Contact information (email, LinkedIn, Twitter, any other platform)
- Blog post in .docx format (including title, figures, references)
- Figures should be included in the text and also sent as separate files
- Everything should be in a single folder titled “Firstname_Lastname”

We can't wait to hear from you!

Your Executive Team,
Grad School Digest